Heavy Dealings at Advanced Prices Feature of Missouri Pacific-International Harvester Rises Slightly Upon Announcement of Annual Dividend-Bond Market Is Active.

New York, Feb. 20 .- A disposition no to make speculative commitments until it could positively be known whether or not the decision by the Supreme Court in the anti-trust cases would be handed down kept the stock market dull and in the main heavy until the hour arrived to-day when certainty on the point was available. Then prices rallied with considerable briskness and closed at a general advance. Presumably some such performance as Rock Island com.

Responsible for Declines, ,

The failure of the Interstate Commerce Commission to make known its judgment in the matter contributed, in part. no doubt, to the slight decline in prices that occurred to-day in the morning hours of the stock exchange business.

In the afternoon rise in the security market the most prominent feature was in every way very heavy dealings at advancing prices in the Wabash refunding 4s, which made a net rise of over three The Wabash common and preferred shares, particularly the latter, sympathized with this movement, and Wall street naturally, and no doubt properly, ascribed it to the change in the general prospect and future for the Wabash company, that has come about by reason of the recent permanent disposition of the affairs of the Missouri Pacific Rallroad Company. All the Gould stocks were strong to-day, presumably because of reasoning of the general nature, and it is noted that in a little more than the week the Western Pacific stock and bonds have made a large advance on American the curb market.

Harvester in Slight Advance.

International Harvester stock rose slightly upon the announcement that the annual dividend on the stock had been increased from 4 to 5 per cent and dividend expectations, and improving prospects were also put forward in explanation of a continuation of the advance in the United States Rubber common share some time ago

In the bond market there were again large transactions in the new New York City 41-4 per cents, which carried th price of the bonds to a new high record This rise must indicate beyond any per adventure that takings of the bonds for investment account, and particularly b European purchasers, have been much more considerable than was looked fo when they were issued.

Of the bond market in general, a fair comment seems to be that while activity there may be somewhat less than it wa of securities of the first grade is still going on in a most satisfactory manne and much more rapidly than was the case a year aco.

sure the 3,000 persons of Hillside, now menaced by typhoid-carrying water, from all danger from that source, according to N. H. Darton, formerly of the Geological Survey, who did the greater part of the geological work in the District. By drilling to the necessary depth, about 550 feet, the District can locate any number of wells from which absosiutely pure water can be drawn. At present Hillsdale is dependent on one public well, which, except that such action would leave the people without any public water source, would long have been condemned as unsafe and suspected of containing typhold bacteria.

Wells Ordered Closed. Already the District health authorities have ordered closed four or five wells of futile efforts to drill or dig to pure faded as far as the water department all that locality. or health office authorities are concerned. By the expenditure of from $3,000 to | deep well and started to experiment with $5,000 for properly bored wells-approxi-mately $1,000 a well-the District can in-feet, and having the water samples twice condemned, they have about decided to give up the project. This is what Mr. Darton, an expert geologist, says about the water facilities of that section "Any shallow well in a locality where there are no sewers, and which is more or less thickly populated, is a menace to health. This is particularly true of Hillsdale. The entire area is composed of gravel and sand, under a thin layer of loam or dirt. This gravel and sand is, of course, very permeable to water and contaminated water from the top or immediately above the surface will sink to a considerable depth and travel easily great distances. "If, however, the wells should be bored deep enough to pierce a good, thick sheet of clay that underlies that locality, water perfectly pure and safe can be reached. The water from the wells drilled by the Government Hosin that district because of the polluted pital for the Insane is as pure as could condition of the water. After numbers be desired. This sheet of water lies on top of a granite formation and under a water, the hope of success has almost thick layer of clay, and extends under

Depth of 400 Feet.

"The St. Elizabeth authorities reached this sheet of pure water by digging about up hope of getting pure water from a 400 feet below the surface of the Anacostia River. As Hillsdale is 170 feet above the sea level, it would be necessary to bore that much deeper to reach this sheet of water from there.

"It would cost about $2 a foot to drill the wells, which, taking into consideration the varying elevations at which they would be placed, would average about $1,000 each. But in that locality one cannot expect to get anything but contaminated water from wells the sources of which lie in the easily permeable sand and gravel."

That there have not been several serious typhoid epidemics in the Hillsdale district, particularly in the lower sections, bordering on the Anacostia road, is considered strange by those who know living conditions in that lo cality

Stream Drains Section.

Running through the most densely populated part of Hillsdale is an open stream, which drains most of that section. Although it has never been chemically or bacteriologically examined, it would be little short of miraculous that this water, draining ground on which lie putrifying and decomposing animal and vegetable refuse, escaped contamination of the worst kind.

Still, unable to afford expensive private wells and finding the one public well too far distant, the inhabitants may be seen daily drawing water from this small stream. Even should their use of the water be confined to bathing considered marvelous.
